PRACTICAL MOBILE SURVEILLANCE and SMALL TEAM FUGITIVE APPREHENSION CQB COURSE

4 Day/40 Hour Course

($1200)

Description: This 40 Hour/4-Day course will focus on surveillance principles, designed as an introduction for those who haven't been formally trained, as well as mission enhancing for law enforcement officers who routinely use surveillance as one of their investigative techniques as well as covering small team fugitive apprehension arrest tactics. This course will cover a wide range of surveillance techniques, including the application of multiple technical surveillance assets. One of the major investigative tools used to combat crime and criminal organizations is surveillance. The age-old surveillance fundamentals, coupled with today's technology, give law enforcement officers the potential to locate criminals and dismantle criminal organizations. Small team vehicle assaults and CQB tactics and clearance techniques will also be covered in this course of instruction. Upon completion of this course, officers will be able to successfully integrate mobile, foot, and multi-mode surveillance into their operational duties in addition to understanding small team fugitive apprehension tactics, techniques, and procedures. This will greatly enhance overall mission capabilities giving the officer confidence to conduct a wide range of surveillance and small unit tactical operations for domestic law enforcement.

Mission planning, decision making, and risk mitigation will also be covered in depth throughout this course

This course will include a classroom block of instruction covering vehicle assaults, small team fugitive apprehension CQB tactics, multiple types of surveillance, surveillance techniques, voice procedures, demeanor, and operational planning. This course will also include practical application, where officers will apply their classroom knowledge in the field to include surveillance follows and high-risk suspect apprehension arrests. Officers will be given a scenario in which they will perform mobile, foot, and multi-mode surveillance or conduct a wide range of apprehension tactical scenarios. The practical exercises will provide officers with an experience that mimics some of the complex criminal organizations and other crimes in which surveillance is needed. These scenarios challenge the officer to remain covert while attempting to follow the suspects then instill tactical decision making problem solving techniques when conducting the apprehension while working in a dynamic high threat environment.
