Instructors: Jesse "Guy" Smith

Course Description:

Course Overview:

This 3-day course is designed to address Defensive Tactics and Firearms in an unconventional and very practical manner. Normally priced at $650 per officer, the Jorge Pastore Foundation is sponsoring a significant portion of the course cost, reducing the registration fee to just $250, per officer. This sponsorship reflects JPF's commitment to providing law enforcement officers with access to high-quality training that helps keep officers safer. The course combines Defensive Tactics and close quarter gunfighting together as one training to better simulate a real-world atmosphere which forces officers to use their critical thinking skills during incidents that force the officer to fight or use deadly force. This course uses an applicable and realistic approach to teach battle tested techniques that will increase survivability, whether it's a fight for survival, a close quarter gunfight, or both. All drills and scenarios are based on the most dangerous situations that are commonly seen in modern patrol work. This course raises the bar to provide real world context. This is a physically demanding course that involves stress-induced training. Please make sure you can perform under stressful situations for extended periods of time.

Instructor:

Guy Smith currently serves as a police officer with the Monroe Police Department in Monroe, Louisiana. He brings 14 years of law enforcement experience, including 13 years as a SWAT operator and 11 years as a Street Crimes Officer. His career includes extensive experience in high risk tactical operations, undercover operations, street level enforcement, and multi agency law enforcement efforts. Guy has served in joint operations with federal law enforcement agencies including the DEA, FBI, U.S. Marshals, and U.S. Secret Service. Those assignments have placed him in complex and high pressure environments that require tactical discipline, sound judgment, and strong operational awareness. Alongside his patrol, SWAT, and street crimes experience, Guy serves as a Monroe Police Rescue and Recovery Diver with the MPD Dive Team. In that role, he has conducted numerous underwater and open water operations related to crimes, accidents, drownings, and natural disasters. Guy has also spent more than 9 years in the private sector providing dignitary protection for high profile clients during travel, large public venues, and religious events. He currently serves as a Staff Sergeant in the Louisiana State Guard, where he specializes in Defensive Tactics training for Louisiana State Guard force protection and pre-deployment support for the Louisiana National Guard. He has been awarded the Louisiana Commendation Medal from the Louisiana National Guard for tactical and technical competence, professionalism, and service.
